

Brief Biographies of Authors

Sopiko Kurasbediani, is a PhD candidate in Law at Caucasus International University (Georgia) and serves as a visiting lecturer at the same institution. Her interdisciplinary research focuses on education law, particularly the legal and policy dimensions of academic freedom and institutional autonomy. Since 2018, she has worked at the National Center for Educational Quality Enhancement of Georgia, where her professional engagements have provided firsthand insight into the challenges faced by Georgian higher education institutions in defending academic freedom and institutional autonomy. These experiences directly inform her doctoral research.
